The teach is friendly, but is straightforward. If you are fairly new to coding outside of Javascript, this teacher is extra strict, as if she expects you to already know the code. She also does not do short assignments, as it is like a 1 project weekly basis. Only take this class if you have prior knowledge with C. Her methods are very... taxing.

There were no lectures uploaded, no notes, nothing at all. We were told to buy a specific textbook that came with an online code and we were graded on completing the online assignments through the program. Easily 6-7 hours of work per week to make it through hundreds of questions per chapter. She literally just input grades from there, no teaching.

Class was not taught appropriately for an introductory course. Skipped around chapters, never truly utilized the book in class, made projects more difficult than they needed to be. She wouldn't be such a bad professor if she took the time to explain things more clearly and didn't expect students to know everything programming beforehand.
