Worst professor I've ever had. The exams have 49 questions covering Modules 1–9, mostly multiple choice. There are three proctored tests, and the final is a Packet Tracer exam worth 30% of the grade. He barely teaches the material and expects students to read through a huge amount of modules and somehow remember everything for these exams.

As far as the testing is concerned, yes, he was always able to resolve the issue but as a professor you set up the course criteria before the class even starts so why am I having to reach out each time it comes for me to test. Why am I not able to pay and take my test the same day, why are there extra stipulations in place that don't need to be.

This professor overcomplicates things. He takes the Cisco template and bloats it. Gives every assignment a due date of the midterm (if it was in modules 1-6) or the final (the rest of the modules) with the syllabus listing only chapters with suggested due dates, rather than each assignment. The Canvas Portal isn't used. 3rd party resources are few.

The first week is light, get familiar types of labs and the cisco platform. Cisco does sell a textbook. Packet tracer labs are standard cisco labs. I don't like the FSCJ NetLab, don't wait til the last minute. Tests are 40% of the final grade, this normal for computer science classes. The tests are not open book, study what he tells you to study.

I don't understand the positive reviews...the man doesn't teach. Online proctored midterm and finals worth 40% of the grade, no book, no notes. Unforgiving of minor errors. Does not use canvas, only the online cisco platform. Very little communication, announcements were often condescending about students' misunderstandings rather than helpful.
